

A

solute in the water retained in the drained interval is not carried into the next time step, and mass is lost sorbate of the drained interval is released to the water that remains, and C rises

B

the interval returns to the mobile domain as though it had held water at the concentration of the previous time step, and mass is created

